Where does eclipse keep it's key-binding settings? I want to transfer them from one system to another. If there is a tool for this that would be good but if not, I'm willing to copy files (really all settings should be the same on both systems.)

Eclipse has a keyboard shortcut which deletes either the current line (if nothing is selected) or all lines which are part of the currently selected text: Ctrl+D. Is there a way to make Ctrl+D do the same thing in Notepad++?. The best I could do is remap the shortcut to Scintilla's SCI_LINE_DELETE, but that only deletes one line at a time, even if the selection spans multiple lines.

How do I make Notepad++ delete lines like Eclipse does?

What happens in a solar eclipse? During a solar eclipse, the Moon comes in way of the Sun's path and blocks its rays. When the Moon blocks a certain part, it is known as a partial solar eclipse.
