Take a picture of yourself or helper looking at a light source with your spectroscope. Notice, that I'm using a piece of white paper to examine the light of this bright halogen lamp. Light bouncing off the paper is better than looking into too bright of a light source. Again report what your spectrums (spectra) look like.

spectral lines, the Lyman series, which corresponds to $N=1$, but they are not visible to the human eye. In this laboratory we will measure the wavelengths of spectral lines from a few gases, which are easy to put inside a discharge tube. Other chemical elements would have different spectra, and the details of these spectra also contain
